

Shorter University requiring staffers to reject homosexuality

Written by Administrator

Sunday, 06 November 2011 21:23

It is good to see a Christian University sticking to Biblical principles.

The snivellers respond by saying we should not 'judge', but scripture specifically commands us to "Judge righteous judgment" (John 7:24). Paul also commanded the believers at Corinth to judge matters amongst themselves instead of going to heathen judges (

1 Corinthians 6

). As usual, those who prefer immorality to godliness take scripture out of context, in order to build weak arguments. Matthew 7 refers to hypocritical judgment, as the context reveals.

Shorter University is requiring its more than 200 employees to sign a "Personal Lifestyle Statement" rejecting homosexuality.

Don Dowless, president of the Christian university in Rome [ed. Rome, Atlanta, USA], said anyone not signing the statement, which also requires staffers to reject premarital sex and adultery, faces termination.

"I think that anybody who adheres to a lifestyle that is outside of what the biblical mandate is and of what the board has passed, including the president, would not be allowed to continue here," Dowless told Channel 2 Action News.

Read the full article here